I received my doctorate and DSC at the University of Copenhagen in 1979 and 1982, respectively. In 1983 I became a professor associated with the University of Denmark or the South (former university of Odense) where I have been taught general ecology and marine biology since then. In 2008, I was appointed professor of marine biology. Over the years I have supervised more degree projects, master and doctorate. My research mainly deals with marine invertebrates with filter and my search profile includes: bioenergetics, particles capture mechanisms, switching between filter and filter power, impact on the pasture of the population of the Bentonic filter feed, impact of predation of Cenophori and Gelatine, Mussel as pollution from pollution indicators, environmental evaluation, absorption of pollutants in the pasture chain. I have often been involved in environmental issues and in parallel with the publication of about 160 scientific articles in international magazines, I also published about 50 popular scientific articles in Danish on current environmental problems: oil pollution, pollution from heavy metals, oxygen depletion, Eutrophication, global warming, degradation of the Ozon layer, mass occurrence of jellyfish mass.
